

Peerooz Saeed, University of Amsterdam

Peerooz Saeed studied medicine at the university of Amsterdam. After residencies in neurosurgery and ophthalmology in Amsterdam, he was a fellow in orbital and oculoplastic surgery in Amsterdam and in Vancouver, Canada. He received his PhD at University of Amsterdam. His scientific work focuses on Graves orbitopathy, Orbital tumors and anatomy on which he is author of many peer-reviewed publications and contributed to textbooks. At this moment is he professor of orbital surgery, the director of orbital center at Amsterdam university medical center (AUMC) and vice chair of department of ophthalmology of AUMC. He has trained many orbital and oculoplastic surgeons from across Europe, North America, and Asia. Since 2004, he is the president the World Access to Medical Advances Foundation an organization which facilitates training and fellowship programs on site. He is member of the orbital society, European society of ophthalmic plastic and reconstructive surgery.