The 2018 PNCMI (Polarised Neutrons for Condensed Matter Investigations) international conference will be held in Milton Hill near Abingdon, UK, on 3–6 July 2018. A two-day exhibition will be held alongside the conference from 4–5 July.

The conference will cover the latest condensed-matter investigations using polarised neutrons and state-of-the-art methodologies and techniques. It is the most comprehensive conference on the latest scientific research using polarised neutrons and on related instrumentation development.

The exhibition will be held in the Lilac dining room, which is located close to the main meeting space, the posters, refreshments and lunch. There will be ample opportunity within the programme for conference participants to meet and interact with the exhibiting companies over the two days.

Exhibiting companies will also get to feature their logo, a link to their website and a description/profile on the event website, increasing visibility to not only the conference attendees, but also the wider scientific community.
