Chair's welcome

Welcome to Biennial meeting of the Polymer Physics Group. To our visitors from overseas and to those of you preparing to deliver your first talk or poster at a conference, I extend a particular welcome. The PPG meeting held at Leeds University in 1991 was the first conference I attended as a PhD student, and I recall well how quickly I felt at home within the UK polymer physics community. Looking back through the history of the conference provides an insight into how polymer physics has evolved in the UK. For many years it was held at the Royal Military College of Science in Shrivenham, before moving to Reading University and then alternating between Reading and Leeds. This was a reflection of the fact that very few physics departments recognised our subject, although it is perhaps a little surprising that it was not until 1997 that it was held in Bristol! Since then the conference has visited a number of institutions for the first time, showing how physics has changed in the past 30 years. This year is our first visit to Lincoln, a recognition that its university is home to one of newest polymer physics groups in the UK. Martin’s success in putting together such an exciting program for us suggests that polymer physics in Lincoln, and within the UK, has a bright future.

Lincoln is an ideal destination for a city break: offering an experience rich in history combined with independent boutique shopping, great arts and culture and a wealth of places to eat and drink.

The city is easily walkable for visitors with good mobility - the main shopping and tourist area stretches from St Marks Shopping centre in the south up to the Cathedral Quarter - known locally as 'Uphill'.

Steep Hill, voted Britain’s Great Street, connects 'downhill' and 'uphill' Lincoln. Yes, it is steep as its name suggests, but well worth the walk!

The city is surrounded by beautiful countryside ready to be explored with walks and cycle routes, where you’ll find quaint market towns, beautiful scenery, and aviation history.
