

Dr Thomas Bannan

Research Fellow, Centre for Atmospheric Sciences

Tom's research activities involve in situ atmospheric trace gas and aerosol composition measurements, in particular using various mass spectrometry instruments on ground and airborne platforms. His current role at the Manchester Urban Observatory is to develop and operate sensors for air quality research and enable opportunities for others to do the same.